I Should Write a Book Ms. Patricia Ann Boxler
Part memoir, part confession, this collection of stories of a life and a life style long lost has been documented by Patti Waldron Boxler to share with her sons. Neither knew their maternal grandfather, William J. Waldron, a loud, fun loving, Irish American, and hard-drinker man. He died long before Eric and Ryan could have learned from him how to be a man of integrity while living life his way. His wife, Marie M. Waldron, Mabs, was no longer the vibrant Lucy Ball character she once was as her health failed after years of smoking. Emphysema had taken its toll as she slowly disintegrated, leaving her bed-ridden. Patti's sons had memories of an old lady with oxygen tubes strapped to her face and Patti wanted them to know more of the vivacious women she once was. Patti Boxler grew up in Newark and Morristown, New Jersey while living with her parents, her older brother, Billy, and younger sister, Lee Lee. Her married life with Big Dave Boxler had her move from homes in Chester and Princeton, New Jersey to Fulton, Maryland and currently, Fernandina Beach, Florida. This is her first attempt at writing personal stories.
